

Tissot Heritage 1936

Tissot Heritage 1936 er en nytolkning av en klokke som var i Tissot kolleksjonen i 1936. Inspirasjonen kommer fra en klokke som kan dateres tilbake til armbåndsurs revolusjonen i 1930. Det var etter innvirkning første verdenskrig at menn begynte å bære armbåndsurs snarere enn lommeur for praktisk grunner. Urmakerne startet ved å ta lommeur og sveise buer på hver side av kassen for å kunne feste på en rem, for å lage en klokke som kan bæres på håndleddet. Tissot Heritage 1936 er utstyrt med en delikat skinnrem i brun som er festet under kassen. Ved å fjerne skinnremmen, kan baklokket på klokken åpnes for å kunne se det praktfulle urverket sine bevegelser.

Watchmaking Legacy

Tissot Heritage 1936

Revolution

The Tissot Heritage 1936 is a reinterpretation of a piece that was in Tissot's collection in 1936. Although the inspiration comes from a watch that dates back to the wristwatch revolution of the 1930s, when they started dominating the market, this version also pays tribute to the very first attempts. It was after the impact of World War I that men started to wear wristwatches rather than pocket watches for practicality reasons. The watchmakers started by taking pocket watches and welding arches on each side of the case in order to slip a strap at the back, as to create a watch that could be worn on the wrist. The Tissot Heritage 1936 is exactly that.

Original

The leather strap stays true to the first watches with a fine-looking crème stitch detailing on the beautiful quality brown leather strap that also serves to strengthen it. After removing the bracelet, the back of the case can be opened to view the magnificent works of the movement. It is also perfect to inscribe personalised engravings. The hands are reminiscent of high-end watchmaking in the old days. Today, such a piece will definitely stand out. It's time for originality.
